Discussion: Using PTZ Cameras

Presentation by Edgar Shane, General Manager, Engineering, JVC USA

New JVC PTZ cameras for Remote production over the Internet (REMI). Remote production and Remote workflows are very popular these days due to obvious reasons. PTZ cameras take this concept even further since not only they can send high-quality video over the Internet but can be also controlled remotely for completely "unmanned" operations.

Vendor Presentation: CONNECTED CAM™ Line Offers High-quality, Low-latency IP Video Transmission

by Edgar Shane, General Manager, Engineering, JVC USA

Producing live video broadcasts is never easy, but it is especially difficult during pandemic times with limited personnel and less travel options. In many cases, the traditional approach of shipping production equipment from location to location with a professional crew may not be an option. Ensuring you still get the content you need in this new environment becomes much easier with the right tools in place. Read more

Spotlight: JCETV: Origin and present day status of Jersey City's Educational and Municipal Channels

by Tom Horan, Jersey City Schools

My video production experience began in the mid 1980's when cable television came to Jersey City. At Seton Hall University in the early 1970's I was taught filmmaking and television production on the then "portable" 1 inch machines. I also learned a lot about broadcasting and hosting a radio show for three years on the pre-Heavy Metal WSOU. But the 1980's arrival of Suburban Cable to the second largest city in New Jersey looked to me like uncharted territory for producing local commercials. Read more

Feature: Federal Communications Law and Policy: What to Expect in 2022

by Nancy Werner, General Counsel, NATOA

After years of frenzied federal activity in the communications space, particularly by the Federal Communications Commission, 2021 was a relatively slow year for local governments in terms of battling proposals that would harm community interests and PEG access operations. On the flip side, this reprieve also meant that little has been done to curb the harmful impacts of past laws and decisions. So, what will 2022 bring? Read more
